About Remergence Biography

Remergence have been writing music since 1997 and to date have written several albums, the style of music ranges from ambient through to dance, a lot of inspiration for the music comes from those around and things that happen from day to day.

In 1997 they started writing music mainly for themselves and for friends that wanted something a little different and personal for them, as time went by many people said "hey, why don't you publish your music it's cool", which at first they laughed off. But later on they decided to release bits
on the Internet.

These were received quite well and after several months the Remergence mailbox would be full of e-mails asking when an album would be released, so they set forth to release their first album.

Remergences first album Nocturnal Entities was released in 1999 closely followed in 2001 by Escape to Paradise, at the end of 2001 their third album Futurism was released, then a two year gap before the release of the fourth album Wide Open Space and then in 2005 the album Standing in the Shadows regarded as their best work yet was

The stories behind the albums

Nocturnal Entities (ATRCD1)

In the middle 1998 with several pieces of work already written the first album "Nocturnal Entities" started it's journey, the aim of the album was to have a rather dark sound to it and a kind of story like architecture.

The story behind "Nocturnal Entities" is that of a traveler on a journey back home from the far reaches of a strange water like planet, with several adventures on the way home, from the first track Dwr Coch (meaning Red Water) where he starts his journey across the planet trying to get home, tracks such as Temptation with him been mislead into doing other things and Under Your Spell where he falls in love.

In 1999 "Nocturnal Entities" was released via downloads on the Internet and had rave reviews from those who downloaded it and after several hundred emails and coxing we decided to start work on a second album.

January 2000 saw the birth of the second album "Escape to Paradise" yet again this album had a musical storyline, but this time the album had a lighter more happier sound and went in the direction of dance / electronica.

Escape To Paradise (ATRCD2)

The story behind "Escape to Paradise" is of one man or woman's journey through the void that we call insanity, with tracks changing from a mild beat to a mad beat giving the

...back to a mad beat giving the effect of insanity.

On this album there is a certain melody that is taken across several tracks to give the effect of a continuation of theme between them, which works quite well, especially when the melody is used with different instruments.

In March 2001 "Escape to Paradise" was released as a payable download, the response was amazing, with 90% of downloads buy people who had now bought the first album on CD, which had now been re-mastered and had 3 Bonus remix tracks added to the CD.

Futurism (ATRCD3)

At the end of 2001 work on the third album started, the working title was "Future Technology" but this was changed at a later date.

This album was a experimental change from the other two and didn' t follow a storyline more of a collection of tunes with a technical sound to them, but, the first track "Intro" followed on from where the second album finished, hence the second track been titled "Déjà Vu".

After several re mixes, changes to several tracks and the title changed to "Futurism". This the third album was released in February 2003 and to date has gone down well with fans of the first two albums.

Wide Open Space (ATRCD4)

This a vast move away from the sounds and style of the first three album, this the fourth album has taken on the Electronica/Dance/Trance sound, it has been described as a cross between Orbital and Enigma.

ATRCD4 went into production in March 2003, tracks which we had thought were not in the same style as though were not in the same style as ATRCD3 and were not used, were remixed and updated for use on the new album.

These included "Causeway, Fantasy, State Of Mind, Do It Right baby and The China Case".

Added to these were previously unreleased tracks that were far faster with hard hitting bass line and plenty of FX.

After several remixing sessions, sifting through several designs for the artwork, Wide Open Space was finally released on 2nd October 2003.

Standing In The Shadows (ATRCD5)

This our fifth album, has a mix of our old and new styles, with tracks such as "Velvet Moon" going back to a similar style of (ATRCD2).

After nearly a two year gap, the long awaited follow up CD to "Wide Open Space", "Standing in the Shadows" includes the track "Terminal Runner" which was a great collaboration between Remergence and Dave Meredith aka Mezzar .

The CD also includes the epic "Continental Drift" running at just over 21 minutes, the track that has had more downloads on the net than any of our other tracks, "Continental Drift" is not so much one piece of music but rather a track that is entwined with some of our other unreleased work to produce a powerful piece of music that keeps them toes a tapping.

Standing In The Shadows was finally released on 30th May 2005.

The Collection

This is a compilation of some of our top downloaded tracks such as: Remember Paris (Beat Mix), State of Mind (Ragga Mix), Back To The Wilderness and 9 other great tracks.

Released January 10, 2006

Released January 10 2006.

Barrier (OST) (ATCD7)

The official soundtrack from Remergence for the movie "Barrier", with this CD we tried to keep our sound but, gave the music a slightly different sound to keep in with the theme of the movie.

The soundtrack has taken a while to produce a some of the original tracks were removed as the film was re-edited and the producers, as well as ourselves, thought that the tracks were not appropriate, but, now the soundtrack is complete and you can get it from this very site.
